ABSTRACT

Presented are comprehensive data on the age group and sex of students attending the State University of New York. Tables array four fundamental student characteristics: (1) age; (2) sex; (3) level (undergraduate/graduate); and (4) load (part-time/full-time). Individual tables are provided for each institution as well as summary tables for institutional types. Summary tables include percent distribution tables. Separate information is provided on students in first-professional programs. (Author)

INTRODUCTION

This is the second report published by the Central Staff Office of Institutional Research which provides comprehensive data on the age group and sex of students attending the State University.

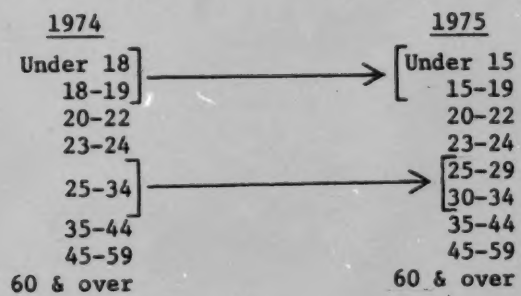
The data presented in this report is particularly relevant to the discussions in higher education regarding significant changes in student body characteristics, e.g., the possible emergence of the older, adult student as an increasingly important factor within educational institutions.

The tables in this report array four fundamental student characteristics:

Age
Sex
Level (graduate/undergraduate)
Load (part-time/full-time)

Individual tables are provided for each institution as well as summary tables for institutional types. The summary tables also include percent distribution tables. This year's report also includes separate information on students in first-professional programs at the appropriate institutions.

The age groups used in this report are changed from those used in the 1974 report. For comparative purposes the two groupings are as follows:



The arrows and brackets indicate the specific areas which were changed. In this particular instance the changes in the age categories were a result of the data requirements imposed on the State University by external agencies. While the desirability of maintaining uniform data collection categories is obvious, the 1975 categories are consonant with those of 1974 and yield a slightly finer level of detail.

SUMMARY OF DATA

The data included in this report have been formatted in a manner designed to provide maximum flexibility, and hence utility, to a wide spectrum of users. Any significant summary of data must reflect the network of interests, goals and priorities of the user of the data. The comments that follow, therefore, reflect but a few of the summary observations that can be made after examining the data.

In the 1974 report it was pointed out that while the majority of undergraduates attending the State University were less than 23 years of age, 33.1 percent of the total undergraduate population was 23 years of age or older. The data for 1975 is similar; with an undergraduate population of 316,185, there were 99,955 who were 23 years of age and older. This represents 31.6 percent of the total undergraduate population. The distribution of these 99,955 students by load (full-time/part-time) is interesting. Of the 99,955 undergraduates 23 years of age and older, 65.9 percent were enrolled as part-time and 34.1 percent as full-time students. In contrast to this, of the 213,119 undergraduates less than 23 years of age, 15.1 percent were enrolled as part-time and 84.9 percent as full-time students. The profile that emerges seems relatively clear: those undergraduates who fall into the "traditional" age expectations tend to be full-time whereas older students are more likely to be part-time students. Of the 99,955 undergraduates 23 years of age and older, 65,430 or 65.5 percent are enrolled in community colleges. To place some perspective on this figure, it should be noted that of the total undergraduate enrollment, slightly less than one-half (49.5 percent) attended community colleges. This high percentage of students 23 years of age and older attending community colleges is no doubt a function of the fact that these students tend to be part-time and community colleges are probably more likely to appeal to this group in terms of both convenience of location and programmatic structure. In contrast, the state-operated institutions receive the majority of full-time students. Of the total full-time undergraduate enrollment at the State University, 61.5 percent or 132,731 students attend state-operated institutions; of the 132,731, 114,385 or 86.2 percent are less than 23 years of age.

The distribution of women undergraduates above and below the age of 35 is of some interest. There are 284,512 undergraduates less than 35 years of age, of which 134,507 or 47.3 percent are women. In contrast to this, of the 28,562 students 35 years of age and older, 15,523 or 54.3 percent are women. This lends some credence to the assumption that larger proportions of women will be enrolling after the age when families are established and children are in school. It is well to note that the same point was made in the 1974 study, but in that case 60.3 percent of undergraduates 35 years of age and older were women. The 6 point difference between 1974 and 1975 is not indicative of a trend, but is primarily attributable to a change in populations, viz., these community colleges sponsored by the New York City Board of Higher Education ceased to be under the program of the State University of New York on July 1, 1975, consequently they are included in the 1974 report but not in the 1975 report. In the fall of 1974, 53.5 percent of the enrollment in the New York City Community Colleges were women whereas 48.0 percent were women in the other community colleges. If the 1974 data is adjusted to exclude the community colleges sponsored by the New York City Board of Higher Education, then 57.8 percent of students 35 years of age and over are women as compared with the 54.3 percent revealed in this study.
